Overview of the department

Stony Brook University | Department of Asian & Asian American Studies

Home > About

Established in 2002, the Department of Asian & Asian American Studies is one of the few departments in the U.S. that integrates the study and teaching of both Asian and Asian American studies. It offers an interdisciplinary curriculum that highlights the history of New York as the home of Asian immigrants since the 19th century and recognizes the importance of the Asia-Pacific in this present century.

Using textual studies and discourse analysis as our primary analytic tools, we focus on the study of Asian and Asian American languages, cultures, and intellectual histories over time and in contact with other global cultures. Among our faculty are internationally-recognized scholars in linguistics, cultural studies, philosophy, and religious studies.

Our global curriculum ranges from studies of classical Asian civilizations to studies of modern Asian diasporic cultures. We offer:

- a B.A. in Asian & Asian American Studies
- a B.A. in Asian & Asian American Studies with Teacher Certification (in Chinese, Japanese, and Korean).

We also offer the following minors:

- Asian & Asian American Studies
- China Studies
- Japanese Studies
- Korean Studies
- South Asian Studies
- Religious Studies

We launched the new MA in Contemporary Asian and Asian American Studies (CAAAS) in the fall of 2016.

In addition, we offer study-abroad programs that provide unique opportunities for immersion in the languages and cultures of China, India, Japan and Korea.
